Answer

I thought the topic was very interesting but wonder if others might have felt it wasn't in keeping with Wild Ones' mission.

I wish he had spoken more about early botany, however I found his topic interesting.

Very interesting program but not particularly relevant to our mission

While not quite in keeping with the sort of presentations we usually have, it was interesting.

Interesting. Something different and he did a good job!

The speaker did not tie it into our mission or native plants. His manner of presentation was dull.

The topic was interesting but it did not meet our requirements to provide programs that teach people about the many benefits of native plant landscaping. Experienced program coordinators should have vetted this proposed program better.

The presentation was quite interesting, however, it would've been much more 'relevant' if there had been more specific information revealed about the types of plant species, and their uses, by early peoples in this region, (or early peoples, in North America, in general).

Very interesting but not about native plants.

Very interesting topic.

Answer

An interesting and excellent presentation. I know this diverges from our usual offerings, but good for us to take a by-way and learn about how the archeological record reveals information about our region.

Ed is a very good presenter and presented the topic so that the average person could learn about the long history of the peoples of this area over thousands of years.

Ed did a very good job of presenting the information he had, and even answered some related questions along the way, and afterwards, which shows that he knows the subject very well, and the audience sure wanted to know more about this subject. In some ways, this presentation leads us all to ask even more questions about the role of the various native plant species that must have been important to early people in this region. Obviously, there is much more that we don't know, about this subject.

I didn't really have an interest in the topic but went to network. I learned a lot and was pleased to learn about the program. One of those state projects that's not talked about but of value on many levels. Glad I went.

very good speaker who knew his subject matter.

Very knowledgeable. Sort of like a college lecture. Hope there's no quia\z

6. How likely are you to attend next month's Wild Ones meeting Starting From Scratch: Planning Your Native Landscape by Rebecca Olson, Owner

Answer

Great topic if we can fit it in our schedules

I am interested, but for physical and age reasons I try to avoid driving at night.

Just too far to travel

Of course I will be there because I have the display and take the photos.

I've seen Rebecca Olson's presentation to our Wild Ones chapter, several years ago. It will be nice to see what else she may have to relate to us.

Almost where we're at with our land.
I need to return a book to the library.
Will be out of town

7. How likely are you to recommend a Wild Ones meeting or event to a friend, colleague or family member? - Comments

Answer

I talked, recently, about it, to a couple of the other volunteers that were recently helping out with burning some of the Prairie areas, at NLI's Nygren Wetland Preserve. Most people seem to have a strong curiosity about the early Native peoples, and their means of existence on this local landscape. We all like to hear about things that have been found, which came from these past periods.

8. Do you have any suggestions for improving the meetings and events that we offer? - Responses

Answer

Offer coffee. ;-)
No
Healthier snacks, offer water.
Next year Spring topic: How can I make my lawn look better without chemicals?
Sure like the cups we're using now.
Nope!
